The Husbandman thus expresse its ideal of an agricultural paper: "The true mis-sion of an agricultural paper is to help farmers. But is it not narrowing the field H. reatly when its work is confined to the methods of labor? Must it draw along forever telling farmers how to plow and sow and reap, how to feed calves and make bens ye lay? A farm journal true to the interests ter culture—should discuss any and every question of public policy in which farmers this

There are a large number of people among the population of the eastern half of our State who are ready to patronize a Fair, yet who cannot make it convenient to attend one so far away as Lewiston; and the same is equally true of the western part of the State with a Fair held at Bangor. With two exhibitions these people are all reached and without the attendance on either being of eriously interfered with by the other. In proof of this, we have the fact, overlooked by many, that the receipts at Lewiston, taking into account the increase of non-revenue admissions, have not been reduced to any considerable extent by the advent of the assecond exhibition. It is a fact seen and in known by all familiar with the matter, that exhibits have been increased by the advent of a second exhibition. Whether the object of the exhibitor be the securing of prizes or the advertising of his stock or his goods, the opportunity for doing it is practically doubled by the two opportunities for comdoubled by the two opportunities of the petition and for showing. While with the opportunity to draw comparisons with and without a second show, at Lewiston there is, and here my find that exhibits, both of stock and ships of the comparison of th miscellaneous, have largely increased from its what they were in the years immediately previous to the organization of the second ne exhibition. If, then, all interests are pro-

At Worcester. a trip in the early morning beyond, brought us on Thursday to the New England Fair at Worcester. With two State fairs on our hands within our own borders, of course but little time and limited space can be given to the New England exhibition. Still so long as we form a part of New England, measure of interest in the New England Fair. This interest the Maine Furner shares, and as no one can gain a strictly reliable impression of a great fair through other parties, it was decided to go and see for ourselves.

Worcester is a grand center for an exhibition of this kind, unequalled at any other point in New England. The Worcester cannot cast a shadow.

Thursday was "Governor's day," and the custom established by the Society (omitted at Bangor) of trotting out the Governors, was again carried out. Gov. Ames, of Massachusetts, and Gov. Sawyer, of New Hampshire, were guests of the Society, stated the architectum, were guests of the Society, stated the architectum, were guests of the Society, stated the architectum, were guests.

The exhibition of cattle was one of the largest, and we would not be surprised if it were the largest ever gathered together by the society, and was a magnificent showing of what the enterprising and intelligent farmers of New England are now doing. We make no attempt to particularize herds or name individuals. These exhibits were chiefly the dairy breeds, though these were included two herds of Herefords and one of Polled Angus. The show of Roisteins was immense, and must have numbered more than 250 individual animais. This goes to show what a hold this stock is gaining with New England farmers, and it is easily seen that they could not have done it without high merit. Lake View Farm, North Andover, Wm. A. Russell, proprietor, showed one of the largest herds, too many to number. Exculsior Stock Farm, Barre, Mass., B. Harris, proprietor, showed 38 head, and River-

County Society has one of the best parks at in the country, and it stood in nearly com-plete readiness for a fair. This society and the people of the city like to have the New England show there. Still, we all know the New England Society is little but a name.—Pardon us ; it has a board of officers, and the individual filling the places are likely to be continued until the death of one or the other comes in to interfere. But there is much in a name, as has been proved at Bangor and Manchester, and now again at Worcester, that the name, minus the the work and plus the figure heads, will draw a good exhibition and a large attendance. It has done this again at Worcester, and the name has again drawn us up there to see it, and again we must record the fact that it was a successful exhibition. The attendance on Wednesday was large and on Thursday larger still, so that the treasury of the Society must be in that plethoric condition without which even the figure visited the exhibition, were introduced to the prominent men connected with the So-ciety and to the prominent berds of stock on exhibition, after which they were exhibited to the public from the guesta' stand. Speeches were made by each of the distinguished visitors, but since, like our own Chief Executive, they represent the indus-trial rather than the linguistic side of our creat rainer than the linguistic size of or deducation, the speeches, happily, were short. Each of these distinguished Governors was noble representatives of that element among our people which has made New England what it is. After these formalities the New England officers with their guests and invited friends proceeding to the Bay State
